Terror on the Mountain: Murders in Mexico Mr. David P. Brockmann

On a bright, warm day in the small colonial city of Patzcuaro Mexico, five kids took a day off from school to go up the mountain. The park that had been carved out just short of the mountain top beckoned. It promised a day free from adults. A day they could relax and enjoy each other's company, some good food, and maybe even a beer or two. By the end of that bright warm day the bloody bodies of six kids littered the scenic retreat. A small time private investigator and a retired Probation/Parole agent are tapped by a famous artist to find out what happened, and to deal with it.
